Captain Blackbeard was a pirate. He loved gold above all other things and he spent all of his time hunting for it.

Blackbeard had been a pupil at the Silver Hook Pirate School, but the school had shut and all of the pirates had to leave. The closure of the school meant that lots of pirates left without knowing how to read treasure maps. They didn't know how to read a compass or measure the distances on the map and work out which way to go.

Captain Blackbeard usually took a lot of pleasure from hunting for treasure, but recently he hadn't found any and he was getting fed up. He had been sailing around the seas that surround Asia for what felt like months. He just couldn't work out where the treasure was. Usually the crew could be seen singing shanties, but now they were laying around, casually draped over the side of the ship looking fed up.

One night, there was a huge storm and it shipwrecked the boat on a beach. Luckily for Captain Blackbeard and his crew, it was the very beach they were looking for!

"Hooray!" shouted Blackbeard. "A huge treasure chest full of gold and jewels - it's a visual feast! I've never seen anything so gold and shiny," he said with delight.
